This unexpected answer of the little fellow spoiled, for the time being the solemnity of the sacrement, and when he got home he was given a few instructions that will doubtless have a lasting effect.

Lately Mr. John Lage, of the Arcade, was mistaken for a burgiar. He has a room over Lang's drug store, and He is in business to make money next to his apartments a young man employed in a dentists shop has a self denial and industry requisite to room. Although they had adjoining coms, they did not know each other A Savings Bank account is the and the other night when Mr. Lane ent home to turn in for the night, he aroused his neighbor, who immediately concluded that burgiars were n the pext room. He cautiously crept into the dentist's trice and called the police, and then vaited for their arrival. He must ave been trembling, for when the officers arrived he was as pale as a ghost, and didn't have very much nore energy left than one.

He told the officers that there was a bold, had burgiar in the next room and when the police excitedly knocked on the door, the noise rudely awakened Mr. Lane, who had by this time begun

"Who's there?" he demanded. "Open the door and see."

"What do you want?" asked Mr. one, who was this time convinced hat the burgiars were on the other side of his door. Each thought the other was a burglar. Mr. Lane was afraid to open the door and the police were afraid to make him. Finally he did venture to open it, however, and when the officers saw who it was they locked in disgust at the frightened coung man, who was still trembling, and left without saying another word. The young man went back to steep a burgiar he is going to be sure it is ne before he sends for the police.

The new telephones would give setter satisfaction if people better inderstood how to use them. When person goes to the instrument, it s useless to ring, for he will not get an answer as long as he does, as the girl at central has no means of knowing he is at the 'phone until the receiver is taken down. After con-nection is made, there are two small disks under a glass covering, containing the numbers of the two telephones connected. As long as both receivers are down the number of each is in full view of the girl and she knows they are using their 'phones, When one hangs up his receiver, the number disappears, and he is disconnected. If both hang up their receivers, both numbers disappear. Therefore when one is called to the telephone and me one else answers it, the latt r should never hang up the receiver former, as it leaves his number in December, in April and in May, but other man is waiting and will ring igam and probably call the gent'ean who answered the 'phone lack

The people would like to know if the authorities are going to take any steps towards stopping the habit of sweeping dust from stores and ofhas ordered it stopped, but the people continue to sweep. They pay no at tention to it, and yet there are half a dozen police officers that certainly ought not be too busy all the time at that bour of the day, to look after such offenders. Aside from the fact that it is unbealthy, it is a great inconvenience to the scores of people who have to pass through clouds of stiffing dust every morning as they go to work. NEW KIND OF ELECTRIC LIGHT.

In matters electrical nothing has atracted quite so much attention within he past two months as the Nernst electric fight, which may be said to lave been introduced to the public by Mr. James Swinburne in a paper re ently read at London before the 80lety of Arts. Briefly put, the Nernst ight, so named after its inventor, Prof. Waither Nernst, of the University of Gottingen, is an incandescent lamp without the usual vacuum bulb, and with the conventional familiar filament replaced by a rod of refractory material-an insulator when cold, but a conductor of electricity when heated. This rod is mounted on two platinum wires-a little paste, made of refractory oxides, being applied to the joints and is mounted in a holder which fits ordinary electric light fitti ca. When the rod is worn out, a new one, with its wide mounts, is all that is replaced; the whole lamp is not thrown away. It is to be noted, however, that the Nernst lamp will not light up of itself, the rod, as stated, being an insulator when cold. The simplest way to start it is to warm it up with a match, or, better, with a small spirit lamp. The principal points made in favor of the new light are cheapness in first cost, lower cost of maintenance and general efficiency, beatdes possibilities in the way of general economy in current distribution due to the permissible use of high voltages.-Cassier's Magazine,
